

Project InVision International Appoints Robert Stefanovich to Its Board of Directors

NOVATO, Calif.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- July 17, 2007

Project InVision International (PII), a leading provider of business performance improvement solutions, today announced that Robert Stefanovich, former Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Artemis International Solutions, has joined its board of directors. Stefanovich joins current board members, Mike Rusert, former Artemis CEO, Tom Miller, former Dupont executive, Matthew Meblin, PII CEO, and Andy Shotz, PII President.

"Robert Stefanovich adds to our board much needed experience in software industry financial management, comments Meblin, "We are thrilled to have him join our board."

Stefanovich brings to the board more than 20 years of financial management experience in the high technology sector. He currently serves as interim Chief Financial Officer for Xcorporeal, Inc., a publicly traded medical device company. Previously, Mr. Stefanovich served as Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Artemis International Solutions Corporation, a publicly traded software company. He also held several other senior finance positions, including Chief Financial Officer of Aethlon Medical Inc. and Vice President of Administration at SAIC, a Fortune 500 company. Mr. Stefanovich was a member of the Software Advisory Group and Audit Manager with PricewaterhouseCoopers hi-tech practice in San Jose, CA and Frankfurt, Germany. He received his Masters of Finance/Accounting and Engineering from the University of Darmstadt, Germany.

"Project InVision has a solid business model focused on emerging opportunities in a growing space," said Stefanovich. "They are strategically positioned to capitalize on opportunities in this sector. I look forward to being a part of this exciting company."

PII's flagship product, Project InVision(R), enables companies to align initiatives with corporate strategy, increase visibility into project portfolios, and deliver projects with repeatable success.
